COMMANDER, MARINE FORCES RESERVE

Hurricane Matthew struck Haiti on October 4, 2016. The storm destroyed valuable farm land and infrastructure. It took out roads, bridges and livelihoods. The first Category 4 storm to hit the island since 1964, it left thousands of Haitians homeless. They were in a state of shock and desperate for help.

That help came the next day with Task Force Matthew from Special Purpose MAGTF-Southern Command, already in the region. Reserve Marines comprised a majority of the task force and worked with the Navy, Army and Air Force to deliver supplies during the critical early phases of the disaster's relief operations. They also worked with the 24th MEU and the USS Iwo Jima when those elements arrived seven days later.

I am proud of the way our Marines performed. The relief efforts in Haiti were a prime example of how the Reserve Component supports the Total Force and how we work seamlessly with not only the Active Component, but with other branches of service and civilian agencies. But I want you to remember this: the people of Haiti, who received more than 478,000 pounds of supplies thanks to your efforts, did not see Reserve or active duty Marines. They saw Marines. When our nation calls on us to respond to global crises, it does not care whether we come from the Active Component, SMCR, AR or IRR. The nation just expects its Marines.

As Marines, we must remember that the successes of yesterday and today do not guarantee victory for tomorrow. I want you to be proud of your accomplishments and acknowledge your enormous contributions to the Marine Corps and to the national security of our country. You went hard in 2016. In 2017, I want you to go even harder.

In this year's message to the force, our Commandant listed six resolutions that all Marines must follow in 2017. One of those resolutions was to improve our readiness because we need Marines and equipment to fight right now. Our readiness begins with you. You must ask yourself: are you ready to deploy tonight? If not, what must you do to prepare? Your personal affairs must be in order. Have you finished your annual training classes online? Are you ready financially? Do you know your ECC? Is your passport current? When was your last dental exam? You must be able to answer all of these questions, and you must ensure your Marines can as well.

You are members of the most feared and respected military organization in the world. Marines are not just able to operate in chaotic environments rife with violence, disorder and extreme stress. We thrive in those environments. Our training, therefore, must continue to simulate those adverse conditions and reflect the challenges that we must face on the battlefield. While providing that realistic training will continue to be my top priority in 2017, I need you to understand that readiness is about so much more. We must continue to always train hard. We must ensure our personal affairs are in order. We must always hold each other accountable. It starts with you.

SERGEANT MAJOR, MARINE FORCES RESERVE

"Demonstrate to the world there is "No Better friend, No worse enemy" than a U.S. Marine."

General James Mattis

It's an honor to serve as your Force Sergeant Major. Marine Force Reserve is the largest Force in the Marine Corps. On April 6, 1917, the Reserve had two commissioned officers and 32 enlisted men on active duty with 1,091 Reserve Marines available for mobilization. Today we have more than 2,200 Reserve Marines on Active Duty and another 30,000 SMCR standing by who are "Ready to Fight."

Now more than ever I need you to be ready to answer the call. I challenge each and every one of you to lead, and inspire your fellow Marines. You must have the discipline to continue to hold the standards of our Corps in-between drill weekends. Continue to PT and also strengthen your minds with Marine Corps skills and knowledge. Utilize resources such as Marinenet for MOS enhancement courses, and take advantage of all the opportunities to attend PME.

You've worked hard to earn the title United States Marine, so "Protect What You've Earned." Think twice before you decide to drink and drive, use illegal drugs, or engage in discriminatory actions. Remember we are Marines 24/7, and the world is always watching. I expect nothing less than greatness from you. Issues such as hazing, sexual assault, and/or alcohol-related mishaps have no place in our Corps. Honor, Courage and Commitment are not just words to say; they are values to live by. Be proud and show the world who we are.

FACES OF THE FORCE

Captain Nathan Wood

During the summer of 2016, Mr. Nathan Wood graduated from Harvard Law School. Months later on March 1, 2017, Capt. Nathan Wood joined approximately 5,000 other Marines and Sailors attached to the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit and deployed to Europe and the Middle East. Since World War II, in nearly every crisis, the Marine Corps has deployed projection forces with the ability to move ashore with sufficient sustainability for prolonged operations. These forces have been organized into Marine Air-Ground Task Forces (MAGTF), a combination of air, ground and support assets. Marine Expeditionary Units, such as the 24th MEU, operate continuously across the globe and provide the President and the unified combatant commanders with a forward-deployed, flexible and responsive sea-based MAGTF.

The 24th MEU currently serves aboard amphibious assault ship USS Bataan (LHD 5), amphibious transport dock USS Mesa Verde (LPD 19), and amphibious dock landing ship USS Carter Hall (LSD 50). It provides crisis response and contingency support for combatant commanders. Composed entirely of active duty Marine Corps units, the vast majority of the MEU’s personnel serve full-time. But Wood’s road to the 24th MEU was a bit more complex.

UNIQUE CAPABILITIES

Prior to the deployment, Wood drilled with 2nd Civil Affairs Group, a reserve unit based in Washington, D.C. that falls under Force Headquarters Group, Marine Forces Reserve. Civil Affairs Marines serve as a critical link between local civilians and military units that operate in their countries. Operations in the counterinsurgency environments of Iraq and Afghanistan relied heavily on civil affairs teams for missions like helping civilian populations build infrastructure. And the Marine Corps’ civil affairs capability, which resides exclusively in the Marine Corps Reserve, will continue to be in high demand. Reserve Marines, who are doctors, lawyers, engineers or policeman in their civilian careers, can be particularly well-suited to this role. So, when Wood saw that the 24th MEU was in need of a civil affairs officer, he took the opportunity and volunteered for the deployment. Since mobilizing, Wood has served not only as the civil affairs officer, but also as the current operations officer, a critical billet that drives the very demanding, daily schedule for the MEU.

"Nate is a true "multi-sport athlete",” said Maj. Chris Niedziocha, the operations officer for the 24th MEU. “He is a thinker, a doer, a leader. He demands excellence of himself and everyone around him. He is a rising tide that lifts all boats. His capacity for work and "can-do" attitude is incredible - nothing fazes him, nothing upsets him. He has taken civil affairs from the periphery and made it part of our standing lines of effort integrating our civil affairs Marines civil-military efforts.”

Wood has since moved onto other roles on the MEU staff, now serving as the Future Operations Officer.

“As the Current Operations Officer, I [had] a hand in just about everything the MEU does,” Wood explained. “Now, as the Future Operations Officer, I’m responsible for long-term planning. I lead several operational planning teams and maintain a number of long-range planning documents.”

Having just graduated from Harvard law school, Wood acknowledged how the rigors of academic life have helped him perform on the deployment.

“Law school was terrific preparation for service as a staff officer,” he explained. “The analytical and communication skills I developed have served me well on the MEU staff.”

A CAREER-ENHANCING EXPERIENCE

Although he served on active duty from 2007-2013, deploying to Afghanistan during that time, Capt. Wood never had the opportunity to be a part of the MEU, a unique capability that the Marine Corps has and a critical element of its ability to respond to today’s crises.

“I have the best seat in the house for learning how a MEU operates and a staff functions,” he said. “This deployment has been much more than just a deployment,” he added. “It’s really been one long professional military education on amphibious operations and officer development.”

The unique opportunity to serve on this MEU’s staff, therefore, was something too good for Wood to pass up, despite a very busy personal schedule that illustrates the challenges reserve Marines face in balancing family and civilian obligations in order to serve.

“We’ve spent a lot of time over the past several years mapping out our lives so we can fit everything we need to fit, like raising our kids, sustaining our marriage, Emma’s career, law school, drill weekends, job search, prep for drill weekends, etc., into our schedules. It helps that everyone from our extended families to my law school professors and to Emma’s employers has been supportive of our family’s Reserve commitments.”

Since their inception in 1916, Reservists have been participating in nearly every major war since World War I. With this, time and training are a constant reminder of their commitment to not only their families, but to the branch in which they serve.

Today, Reserve Marines bring unique skills and advanced knowledge from their civilian occupations into their service with the Marine Corps. The breadth of their experience is extensive as it includes occupations such as Wood’s law degree. The Marine Corps has capitalized on this advantage by creating occupations like the Civil Affairs Group, among many others, within the Reserve component.

"Although I can't wait to get home to Emma and our boys, it'll be tough to leave the MEU behind," said Wood. "Not only have I learned a tremendous amount, but I've also forged friendships and professional relationships that will last well beyond this deployment. I look forward to resuming my civilian career while continuing to serve as a reserve Marine. Balancing the two is far from easy, but more than worth it."

MARINES FORCES RESERVE ANSWERS TEXAS'S CALL

U.S. Marines with 4th Reconnaissance Battalion, 4th Assault Amphibian Battalion and 14th Marine Regiment, 4th Marine Division, came together in wake of Hurricane Harvey to conduct search and rescue missions and provide disaster relief to effected areas of Texas and Louisiana, Aug. 28-Sept. 3, 2017.

Hurricane Harvey was a storm of record breaking proportions, dropping an estimated 27 trillion gallons of water or 51 inches of rain in areas of both Texas and Louisiana. U.S. Marines supported lead federal agencies and worked closely with state and local officials to conduct search and rescue missions. With flood waters rising to record proportion, the Marines' amphibious capabilities, which make them unique amongst the services, allowed them to swiftly rescue residents in distress.

The U.S. Marine Corps Reserve is exceptional in its ability to respond quickly to any call and to flexibly conduct operations through air, logistics and ground elements. For example, the Marines rapidly mobilized and used their amphibious assault vehicles designed to transport Marines from ship to shore for rescuing approximately 327 residents from flood affected areas.

KNOW (AND UNDERSTAND) your options IN THE RESERVE

CONTACT A PRIOR-SERVICE RECRUITER:
WWW.MARINES.COM
CLICK "CONTACT A RECRUITER"

There is more to the Reserve Component than drilling once a month and annual training two weeks a year. There are a number of different ways to participate, such as serving part-time with an active duty unit through an IMA Detachment, volunteering for active duty operational support orders or a mobilization, or making a full-time career in the Reserve Component through the AR program.

SELECT MARINE CORPS RESERVE (SMCR)

The Select Marine Corps Reserve (SMCR) offers the most traditional form of Reserve duty. A typical unit in the SMCR has a designated drill weekend every month. On top of monthly drills, that unit also does its annual training, often in conjunction with an exercise. The exercises can range from large-scale exercises in which the Marines operate as part of a MAGTF, such as ITX or African Lion. They can also participate in annual training as part of smaller teams such as the Innovative Readiness Training programs or through civil affairs detachments.

SMCR Marines typically train as units, so it is a good way for Marines to experience camaraderie and unit cohesion without being on active duty. Training as units according to a relatively rigid schedule is a hallmark of service in the SMCR.

INDIVIDUAL MOBILIZATION AUGMENTEE PROGRAM (IMA)

Through the IMA program, reserve Marines fill particular needs of active duty units on a part-time basis through the IMA program. As an IMA Marine, you could fill a billet with Marine Forces Pacific, Marine Forces Europe or wherever there is a need. Marines serving in an IMA Det often have much more flexibility than their SMCR counterparts as when, where and how many drills they do depends on that Marine's schedule and the needs of the unit. IMA billets are typically for more experienced reserve Marines (E5 and above). These billets are good for Marines who need to have a more flexible drill schedule.

ACTIVE RESERVE (AR)

Marines in the AR program serve full-time. They receive all the same pay and benefits as active duty Marines. They also change duty stations, can serve as additional billets as recruiters or drill instructors and can qualify for active duty retirement benefits.

These Marines fall under the Reserve Component, however, and serve in billets on Inspector-Instructor staffs, Marine Forces Reserve headquarters or Manpower and Reserve Affairs.

INACTIVE READY RESERVE (IRR)

The IRR is a pool of Reserve Marines that have no participation obligations, but can be called to active duty in a time of crisis. Marines in the IRR report one day per year at a "Mega Muster" where they have opportunities to update their contact information, learn about benefits of continued service and the many opportunities for participation in the Reserve Component.

ACTIVE DUTY OPERATIONAL SUPPORT (ADOS)

There are always opportunities for Reserve Marines to serve temporary stints on active duty. These short-term orders, which are usually six months but can vary in length, are called active duty operational support (ADOS). Reserve Marines on ADOS can serve anywhere. Tasks run the gamut from administration to training to operations. These Marines provide critical support to units that are often overburdened, experiencing manpower shortfalls or have high operational tempos. For a list of ADOS opportunities, see:

EARNING POINTS what you need to know:

POINTS MEASURE YOUR PARTICIPATION IN THE RESERVE FORCE AND DETERMINE RETIREMENT BENEFITS. IN ORDER TO GET A SATISFACTORY YEAR, YOU MUST EARN 50 POINTS.

- You get 15 points just by keeping your MOL information updated. The rest is based on your participation.

• Drill: 1 Point per Drill Period (Each Drill weekend normally has 4 Drills, so this is good for 4 points on a normal Drill weekend).

• Funeral Honors: 1 Point for funeral honors (normally capped at 1 Point per day).

• Active Service: 1 Point for each day on Active Service (Annual Training, ADOS, Mobilization)

• PME: 1 Point for every three study hours of qualifying military correspondence courses.

Maximum Points

The maximum number of retirement points Marines can earn in any given year is 365 (366 in leap years). This corresponds to serving every day on active duty. You cannot "double dip" on Retirement Points and do correspondence courses or other service to earn more than 365 Points in a given year.

Career Credit Retirement Report (CRCR)

This is a snapshot of reserve participation, which Marines can access via Marine Online. Marines must always ensure the accuracy of their CRCR and are required to certify it once per year.
